Polarization in the U.S. Catholic Church:
Naming the Wounds, Beginning to Heal

Monday, April 27, 2015
4:30–6:15 p.m.
McKenna Hall,
University of Notre Dame

First come, first served. Seating is limited.

It is no secret: the body of Christ in the United States is broken. Division and disunity prevail. Effects of this brokenness are by now familiar, especially at a place like Notre Dame. Only rarely does a genuinely diverse group of Catholics come together to name our wounds—with the goal of beginning to heal. Come hear this distinguished panel address the question: How can we heal the division and reestablish the virtues of solidarity, love, and humility at the heart of the Christian message?

The panel discussion is the opening session of an invited conference of the same name, taking place April 27–28, 2015 at Notre Dame.

Panelists
Most Rev. Daniel Flores
Bishop of Brownsville, Texas
Rev. John I. Jenkins
President, University of Notre Dame
Julie Hanlon Rubio
Professor of Moral Theology, St. Louis University
Christian Smith
Professor of Sociology, University of Notre Dame
Michael Sean Winters
Writer, National Catholic Reporter

This event will be live streamed at csrs.nd.edu/events/polarization/.

Sponsors
Center on Religion and Culture, Fordham University
The Louisville Institute
Our Sunday Visitor Institute
Notre Dame Center for Ethics and Culture
Notre Dame Center for Social Concerns
Notre Dame Center for the Study of Religion and Society
Notre Dame Cushwa Center for the Study of American Catholicism
Notre Dame Institute for Scholarship in the Liberal Arts, Henkels Lecture Series